To whom it may concern,

As a Computer Science student and an all-around tech head, I am also a motivated and enthusiastic retail professional with strong customer service and interpersonal abilities.

As shown on my portfolio, I have hands on experience efficiently coding websites and applications using HTML5, CSS, and JavaScript. In addition to my knowledge base, I actively seek out new technologies and stay up to date on industry trends and advancements.

During the lockdown, I developed numerous skills and strengthened existing abilities, all which would serve me well at your company. With a few courses from Udemy I have honed my aptitude with object-oriented programming, user interfaces, wireframes, and python, among other areas.

I am not only fond of the web development work that I do, but I take great pride in it, as well. If given the chance I will bring that same work ethic and drive.

Highlights of my experience include the following:

Exhibiting a hands-on approach to sales, and leveraging strategies to drive product sales and propel revenue growth.

Demonstrating solid time management, interpersonal, and communication skills. My expertise in sales, team collaboration, and customer service are proven, and I am confident my additional strengths will readily translate to your environment.
